J. The agenda adopted by the working Group at its second meeting and subsequently approved by the Carear Service Committee was the subject of considerable discussion and work by the members of the Working Group. A great deal of time and work was devoted to a number of items on the agenda which quite clearly would require legislative action to secure attainment of the benefits desired. However, the working program of the Group was considerably revised by the memorandum from the Carear Service Committee, dated 10 January 1952, submitted to the Working Group at its 12th Meeting. In that memorandum the Carear Service Committee directed particular attention of the Working Group to the three particular items on the original agenda which could be secured without legislative action.

employees of CIA to become a part of the Morking Group that in order to induce employees of CIA to become a part of the Career Development Program and to submit to its disciplines the Agency must provide specific and tangible benefits to the careerist. These tangible benefits will be earned by the employee when he qualifies for and enters the Career Development Program, and will be enjoyed by him as long as he is a participant in the program and submits to its disciplines. They should not be available to those suployees who refess or are unable to meet the program's standards. It is our belief that the altimate attainment of the recommended program of career benefits is necessary and desirable to develop an asprit de corps and to secure outstandingly qualified individuals who will consider service with CIA as a career. Such a body of people with an adequate caprit de corps is a prerequisite to the successful accomplishment of the assigned mission of CIA.

a. In addition to the career benefits of a tangible nature to which this Working Group has addressed itself, we recognise and wish to state here that equally important are the intangible benefits accruing to career employees by virtue of a soundly administrative career management program. Therefore, all aspects of the career service program, including training, selection criteria, rotation, etc., must be geared toward developing well rounded individuals who can advance into the senior positions within the Agency.

b. The necessity for a career benefits program for CIA is dependent to a large degree on the peculiar nature of the mission of this Agency and the resulting stringent requirements demanded of its employees. We need not dwell on the security aspects which force a role of anonymity, which under normal circumstances is repugnant to professional people. Further, the physical and mental stresses required particularly in the field of active operations are such that a compensating factor is essential. The compensating factor in our opinion should be the career benefits program as recommended by this Werking Group.

5. The program of additional carear benefits deemed desirable by this Group is summarised below. These benefits were summarised in Tab 8 of the Progress Report submitted by the Career Service Committee to the DCI in January, 1952. The first grouping consists of those items which do not require legislation; the second grouping are those items which would require legislation.

Group I

a. Additional pay for various types of hazardous duty.

b. A meritorious award system providing for recognition of distinguished service to the Agency by model, certificate, monetary, or a combination of all three.

o. A CIA overseas post classification system providing benefite responsive to unbealthful conditions.

d. Better group health insurance.

Group II

- e. Applications of the principles of the United States Employees' Compensation Act to dependents of employees engaged in hazardous duties who are themselves exposed to hazard.
- f. Death gratuity of six months' base pay to dependents of OIA employees whose death occurs in line of duty while serving overseas.
- g. Pay, within-grade raises, and grade promotions for vouchered funds personnel who are detained involuntarily by foreign governments.
- h. A more liberal retirement system.
- 1. An appropriate and adequate leave system for all overseas employees.
- of additional career benefits which do not require legislation (Group I above). It is recognized that a considerable amount of work must be applied to the principles recommended by this Group. However, if the principles are approved, the details should be worked out by the appropriate administrative or operating activities in the Agency responsible for the subject matter. It is recommended that continuing attention be given to those items of the program of career benefits which will require legislation to secure their attainment. It is strongly urged that the recommended Career Benefits Program be assigned as a principal mission to the Gareer Service Staff. That Staff would be responsible for securing advice, guidence, and coordination from all activities of the Agency which are appropriately concerned.

- d. Logialative action. (while testinically the DI could authorize this benefit for unvoushered personnel, there is no sutbority for the MI to approve similar benefits for vouchared personnel. Specific provision for this benefit was made in the proposed wording of P. L. 110 prior to its enactment. At that time, the Bureau of the adget requested its deletion on the grounds that no procedent existed for such a provision. hile it is true that some precedent has been established with respect to the aread services, there is none with respect to civilian employees of the U. S. Government. Therefore, it would appear essential to secure legiclative approval prior to granting such benefits to any Agency personnel.)
